It affords me pleasure to assure you that after using Dr. C. Melane's Celebrated Liver Fills for more than twenty years in my family, that I regard them as being superior to any I have ever used or have seen used. I have not had them constantly and had to try others, and I have tried a good variety, but I have never had any to act so promptly, profainly, and I have tried a good variety, but I have never had any to act so promptly, profainly, and wife, and children, with the most gratifying results. For children, having used them on my own with such easy and happy effect, I would recommend them to one and to all. These pills do the work—do it promptly, do it well, and leave no ill effects behind. As a bile remover, as a liver corrector, as a forerunner proparing the system for quinine, there is no nill or medicino equal to Dr. McLane's Celebrated Liver Fills. I expect to use them as long as I live, if they continue as good as they have been I vous truly. E. H. GLES. Pastor M. E. Church South, Myers Station, and by virtue of this royal gift was set on a pedestal, petted and caressed, while the rest skimped, planned and pinched, in order that she might always be present-able. On the present occasion, however, had it not been for Aunt Elinor's generability, Jean as Frances said, would have staid at home or else gone to the Drayton's ball in her old muslin. The family purse was empty, Jean dissolved in tears when at the fast minute Aunt Elinor came to the rescue bringing her wedding gown. That treasured gown, which had lain for the last quarter of a century smothered in rose-leaves and lavender, its lace and brocade worth a small fortune. Luckly there were no alterations to be made for Aunt Elinor, in spite of her present avordupols, had been just such a slim, slip of a girl as Jean was now.

HER WEDDING GOWN.

BY DORA VIRGINIA OSEDENS.
For the Intelligencer.
It lay on the bed, a lovely shining heap, a faint odor of rose leaves lingering in its folds and the filmy lace of its trimmings.
Jean, the self same Jean who an hour before had been a maiden all forlorn, crying because she had nothing to wear to the Drayton's fancy dress ball, bent over it with little ecstatic cries of admiration. "I can scarcely believe it," she said drawing a long breath. "Auntie, do you really mean it—can you mean it? I'm sure I wouldn't be willing to give away this lovely dress."

"Not to mention this lovely fan and these white satin slippers, and saik stockings," interposed her sister Frances with a lofty wave of the hand. "A veritable Cinderella outfit in all truth."

"My dear Jean, your selfishness makes it impossible for you to realize such magnanimity; but allow me to assure you that Auntie does nothing by halves."

"You needn't make remarke," retorted Jean, flushing a little; "you are only jeal."
"I am not in the least jealous," continued Frances calmly: "on the contrary, I am philosophical. You own that dress by the mere accident of birth; had I precept an anothing a little; "you are only jeal on the server when had drifted safely into the harbor of martimony, not however without a knowledge of the shoals on which so many lovers are weeked. "I am not in the least jealous," continued Frances calculy: "on the contrary, I am philosophical. You own that dreas by the mere accident of birth; had I preceded you in the world I should have been named Elinor Jeanette sure as fate. Then my bonnie Jean," seizing that young woman and waltzing her in fine shape around the room, "you would either have staid at home or gone to the Drayton's in your old muslin, whose glory is passed by the way, No. I'm not jealous. Nothwithstanding you are a thousand times prettier than I, that Auntie has bestowed on you the wedding gown, that—

Here Frances was stopped short in her enumeration of Jean's blessings by that same aunt, who rescued her pet and carried her off to get a beauty sleep, she said. Left to herself, Frances made a few more gyrations around the room, then dropped into a chair with a mighty sigh. Fate had not used her kindly. She had neither beauty nor wit. She had worn Jean's old gowns from time immemorial; her gloves were always mended to the less side yield gown was the beauty of the family and by virtue of this royal glift was act on a pedestal, petted and caressed, while the rest skimped, planned and pinched, in order that she must always a present.

Aunt Elinor who had sat up waiting for her niece, heard the outburst, and scarce believing her own cars hurried into Jean's room. "Why dear child. What on earth is the matter? are you sick?"

"No, no," gasped Jean, "I'm not sick, it's all that bateful Larry's fault."

"And pray, what has Larry been doing, that you should work yourself into such a state on his account?" inquired her aunt accastically
